GALVESTON, Texas - Local attorney Tad A. Nelson was a commentator Friday on the nationally -televised Court TV.

Nelson, who has offices in Galveston and League City, discussed Georgia vs. Dionne Baugh, who was convicted of beating to death her boyfriend with a large crescent wrench.

Nelson, a former Galveston County assistant district attorney, commented from the view of a criminal defense attorney.

On Thursday, Nelson was on "The John Walsh Show" to discuss his client Ronnie Robbins, the Santa Fe man charged with endangerment to a child after shackling his daughter to keep her from running away.

The nationally syndicated show was taped for a later broadcast.

However, "The John Walsh Show" isn't broadcast in the Houston-Galveston area.

Nelson was in New York City for both shows.
